The History of Liheslaturan Guåhan

The Guam Legislature, Lihselaturan Guåhan, is the lawmaking body of the government of Guam and was created by the Organic Act of Guam, passed by the U.S. Congress on May 23, 1950. Prior to the Organic Act, all authority resided with the governor of Guam. The Guam Congress, predecessor to the Guam Legislature, was merely a group of local officials with no power other than as an advisory body to the governor.

The new empowered legislative body, the 11th Guam Congress, was elected on November 7, 1950 and one of its first acts was to rename itself the Guam Legislature, effectively creating the First Guam Legislature, I Mina Uno Na Lihselaturan Guåhan. The first Speaker was Antonio Won Pat. Today, his daughter Judi serves as the Speaker of the 31st Guam Legislature.

The Organic Act of Guam grants lawmaking powers to the legislature, subject to the approval or veto of the governor. The legislature can override a governor's veto with a vote of two thirds of its members. However, the lawmaking power of the legislature is not absolute, the U.S. Congress reserved the power to annul any laws passed by the legislature at any time, although to date, that power has never been used.

2009 Man'amko Celebration

Guam Legislature Building Restoration & Rehabilitation

For decades the Guam Legislature was housed in the Guam Legislature Building in Hagåtña, the first building erected in the island's capital following World War II. The building is recognized for its historic status in both the Guam Registry and the National Registry of Historic Places.

In 1990, the building was deemed inhabitable after decades of neglect, forcing the Guam Legislature to take up residence in the former Department of Education building at 155 Hesler Place. Over the years, the Guam Legislature Building continued to degrade until plans were developed between the Guam Preservation Trust and the Guam Legislature to have the building restored and rehabilitated.

The restored building will feature the fine ifit woodwork it was known for and the additions will incorporate the same feeling as the original areas. The rehabilitation project is following strict LEED guidelines that make the restored Guam Legislature Building the most environmentally friendly building in Guam's history, saving both money and precious resources. ♻️
